HUERTA RULE IS AT AN END

Carbajal is Now Provisional President of Mexico

TRYING TO PREVENT RIOTING

Madera Leaders Will Cooperate With Americans in Preserving Peace—Other Foreigners Warned to Remain in Their Homes—Carbajal Acceptable to General Carranza Under Certain Conditions—Fear That Zapata Rebels Will Try to Loot Mexico City.

(By International News Service)
Mexico City, July 16—General Victoriano Huerta, provisional president of Mexico resigned at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Francisco Carbajal, minister of foreign affairs, will act as provisional president until a president is elected.

The Resignation.
Huerta presented his resignation as president of the republic to the chamber of deputies last evening, through the department of foreign relations.

The resignation was referred to a committee, after it had been read. The deputies and spectators who filled the galleries shouted "Viva Huerta!"

At 7:20 o'clock last evening Francisco Carbajal took the oath of president before the assembled deputies and senators.

The new executive, escorted by the presidential guards, went immediately to the national palace. He was cheered by the people.

All members of the Huerta cabinet have tendered their resignations.

The First News.
The newspapers story of Huerta's resignation was the first intimation of the great mass of people here had that the dictator's regime had passed with Francisco Carbajal succeeding as president.

Will Help to Prevent Rioting.
The news caused no perceptible change in the capital's daily life. With soldiers patrolling principle streets the night passed quietly. The troops and police are redoubting their efforts to prevent a possible outbreak today.

The Madero leaders endorse Carbajal and will urge Carranza to cooperate with the Americans in maintaining peace. Other foreigners are advised to remain indoors. Should a reign of terror develop the international squadrons on the east coast are likely to rush marines to the scene.

Carranza Acquiesces.
Saltillo, Mexico, July 16—General Carranza is willing to abide by the tenure of provisional President Carbajal, provided it is but a step to the final triumph of the revolution. Upon the first sign of dicker or treachery Carranza will complete the capture of the capital. This was made plain by Carranza's confidants here.

May Leave Under Escort.
Washington, July 16—Rear admiral Badger reported to the navy department last night that reports reaching Vera Cruz said General Huerta and General Blanquet would "leave Mexico City by train under escort." There was no mention of destination, but officials here think the retired dictator will go to Puerto Mexico to board a foreign man-of-war for Europe.

Word also came that the special train with members of the families of Huerta and Blanquet are proceeding to Puerto Mexico. Advice received here report that they passed Cordoba at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, taking the Vera Cruz Isthmus railroad.

Assault on Mexico City.
Washington, July 16—Generals Ob-

regon and Gonzales will lead, and Villa will support the final assault on Mexico City.

This is the information received here by Constitutionalists representatives yesterday. It indicates, they say, that Villa is now willing to assume a subordinate position to emphasize that the Constitutionalists are again a unit. Preparations for a forward movement they say are complete, and only wait arrival of needed ammunition for Obregon's army. This will be rushed to him at once from Tampica, the schooner Sunshine, with an enormous cargo aboard, having docked there last night.

Fear a Zapata Raid.
If Huerta and Blanquet leave the capital officials say the last restraining force which can prevent looting will be eliminated. They fear this will be the signal for a Zapata raid. The bandit is near the capital with a large force. He has wanted to raid it for many months. Carranza has alleged that Zapata will act with him. If he does the situation will be simplified; if not, and foreigners suffer, the United States is very likely to be held responsible.

Word has been sent to Carranza to protect foreigners in Mexico City at all hazards. It is hoped that if Huerta flees the Constitutionalists will rush his forces to the capital with all possible speed. If he does so, and looting is prevented, then a final satisfactory settlement can be quickly reached.

Willing Workers' Social.
The Willing Workers of the Baptist church will hold a social on the lawn of the church Saturday afternoon and evening. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.
The W. C. T. U. will meet in the Y. M. C. A. Friday at 7:30 P. M. Matters of importance will be discussed and a full attendance of members is requested.

MANY APPLICATIONS FOR PEDAGOGUE JOBS

Pass Examination For Provisional Certificates

The examinations for provisional teachers certificates closed on Monday, July 13. There were 370 applicants for certificates and 348 were granted. Many of those who took the examination were High school graduates. James Weber, the valedictorian of the class of 1914 at the Clearfield High school, ranked highest in the list when the papers were corrected.

There were 72 applicants for professional certificates in the townships this being the largest class in years. Fifty-seven certificates were granted. The permanent examination was held in Brookville and 7 certificates were granted.

There are 537 schools in the county. Many of the teachers employed are normal graduates, and each year more school boards are demanding that their teachers have normal training.

There are a great many more teachers applying for schools this year than will be needed. This gives an opportunity to the directors to choose those who are best fitted for the work. There is surely no need of employing teachers who cannot perform successfully the work of teaching a school when there are so many to choose from the case. The judge quashed the indictment and the commonwealth carried the case to the state supreme court. The latter directs that the order of Judge Searle be reversed and the indictment reinstated. This means that this famous case will again be heard in the Clearfield county court.

PRESIDENT WILSON IS ILL AND CONFINED TO BED

(By International News Service)
Washington, July 16—Official Washington was given cause for anxiety this morning when it was announced that President Woodrow Wilson is suffering from indigestion.

He has cancelled all engagements and is confined to his bed. Dr. Grayson is in attendance at the president's bedside.

While the president's trouble is not regarded as serious and he may be able to resume work tomorrow, his official family display considerable concern over his condition.

The president's illness followed his attendance at a birthday dinner given at the home of Secretary of Interior Lane last evening.

Company Expects to Submit Statement About August 4—Borough Council Holds Long Session at Which Many Matters are Discussed and Some Business Transacted.

Borough council discussed a wide range of subjects at the regular session Wednesday evening. The actual business transacted consisted of authorizing Dr. Reiley, president of the board of health, to purchase equipment for the analyzing of the milk and water offered for consumption in Clearfield; directing placing of crossings and arranging for constructing at least one sanitary sewer.

Prior to the meeting of council Daniel Rhinesmith was sworn in by the burgess as a councilman from the Third ward, having been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Abram Tate. Mr. Rhinesmith will serve till January, 1916, his successor being chosen at the election in November, 1915.

Money for Firemen.
Burgess Callahan made a number of recommendations regarding sidewalks and turned in a check for $350, license fees collected. The firemen will receive $54.60 as their share of the license fees granted on the Fourth of July.

The borough treasurer reported a balance of $5833.31 in the various funds of the borough.

Among the bills read and ordered paid was one of $110 for printing the improvement bonds and one of $2 for repairing the stop watch used in timing automobile drivers.

Expert Now at Work.

A letter was received from the Clearfield Water company in which it was stated that the company's expert accountant is at work on the books of the company and that he would be able to give the company a report in time to enable it to transmit to council the data desired as to the cost of construction and maintenance of the water plant, about August 4.

It was decided that the only solution to the difficulty on Hannah street was the construction of a sanitary sewer letting the property owners attend to their house drains as best they can.

A number of sidewalks were reported in bad condition. The West Side M. E. church trustees will be directed to raise the walk in front of that building.

Impure Milk and Water.
Dr. Reiley, president of the board of health, was authorized to purchase an equipment and material necessary to the analyzing of the milk and water consumed in the borough. It was stated by Mr. Heck that there are four cases of typhoid fever in town and that the disease had been traced to the milk sold here.

Property owners on South Second street will be notified to set their curbs and gutters preparatory to the repaving of that thoroughfare.

The playgrounds matter was discussed at some length, councilmen being in favor of helping the ladies in their laudable purpose of having a playground in each of the four wards of the borough. An article on this subject will be found in another column.

A general and extended discussion of the work done by the B. R. P. railroad on Nichols street resulted in the proposition that members of council visit the scene and examine into what had been done and what should be done to complete the work.

The plans for the new Fourth ward fire house were examined, but no action taken.

UNJUST RULE BY COMMISSION

Burdensome Conditions Prevent Building of a Bridge

TO REPAIR OLD STRUCTURE

Water Supply Commission Asked the Commissioners of Clearfield and Center Counties to Condemn Property and Expel Large Amount of Money in Erection of New Bridge, and Project Was Abandoned.

A joint meeting of the county commissioners of Center and Clearfield counties was held at the Sheffer hotel Phillipsburg, Wednesday, to take up the question of a bridge over Moshannon creek at Presque Isle street. The subject of repairing the old bridge or building a new one has been under consideration for some time, and several months ago the later course was decided upon. Approval of the state water supply commission became necessary and plans were submitted to it in detail last April. Their decision on the matter was not reached until their July meeting, and word of the decision was received by the commissioners at the end of last week.

Project Abandoned.

The water supply commission approved the plans submitted for a two span bridge, but coupled the same with such conditions and qualifications that the project has had to be abandoned. Conditions imposed upon the counties would have involved the condemnation of a considerable stretch of Presque Isle street, for a third span, would have involved the counties in a probable expenditure of many thousands of dollars to pay damages to property owners, and would have caused additional delay if the requirements of the commission were met. In addition those requirements compelled the commissioners to guarantee the performance of certain conditions by the authorities of Chester Hill borough, which was beyond the power and jurisdiction of county commissioners. The latter condition related to the street or road on the Chester Hill side of the bridge.

Will Repair Old Bridge.

The imperative need of some way of crossing the creek without further delay, together with the burdensome conditions of the water supply commission, caused the abandonment of the proposed new bridge. Plans are now under way for the permanent repair of the present structure, and it is expected that work will be begun upon it within a couple of weeks. On account of the serious illness of J. H. Wetzel, E. W. Hess, of Clearfield, was appointed engineer in charge of construction, and some opportunity will be given him to go over the plans and specifications before work is actually started. The commissioners of the two counties were prepared to proceed with construction of the new bridge, and only the conditions imposed by the department at Harrisburg caused them to abandon that project.

Special to the Progress.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 16—Miss Elizabeth Mitchell, of Clearfield, was one of seven bridesmaids Tuesday evening in Cortland, N. Y., at the marriage of Miss Dorothy Bard Gillette, of Cortland to Leon Barnes Stanford, also of Cortland, Rev. Carl M. Scovel, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Stephen A. Lloyd, rector of the First Congregational church, Cortland. Miss Mignonette Dick, Wilkes-Barre, and Miss Edith Troup, of Harrisburg, also were bridesmaids. After August 1 Mr. and Mrs. Stanford will reside permanently in Cortland where the groom is superintendent of the F. H. Cobb company.

FIVE CREWS RESTORED

Slight Pickup of Business on B. R. & P. Railway is Indicated.

Four new crews have been restored to duty on the B. R. & P. railway out of Punksutawney, and one new one has been put on at DuBois. This would indicate that business is picking up, slowly, perhaps, but surely.

Two additional crews will likely be restored to the Indiana branch within a few days. The coal business is picking up gradually, and there is some prospect of steady work at a few of the mines.

A Dog the Thief.

There was excitement on the West Side when it was learned that a ham had been taken from Barger's restaurant, but about the time a search warrant was talked of it was discovered that a dog was the guilty robber.

COUNCIL ASKED TO AID PLAYGROUND PROJECT

Womans Club Plan to Have Them in Every Ward

At the sessions of borough council last evening it was announced that the ladies in charge of the playground movement in Clearfield are desirous of having playgrounds in each of the wards of the town and asked council to appropriate $150 toward the purchase of the necessary equipment.

Members of council expressed their approval of the playground idea and were ready to vote the desired money, but as there is an act of assembly governing the appropriation of money to such purposes it was decided to postpone action until the borough solicitor had learned just what this act of assembly provided.

The Woman's club is planning to establish a play ground in the lower part of Witmer park this summer. Mrs. Philip Reed, the chairman of the playground committee, who so ably supervised last year's playground, will have charge of the establishment of this year's and two girls will be hired by the Woman's club to assist her.

The object is to establish a place where the children will be kept off of the street and taught to play. Stories will be told and games played. The playground will be open every afternoon.

GOVERNMENT DEMANDS ORDER

Commanders on Texas Border Advised to Have Troops in Readiness to Move on Short Notice—Funston's Forces to be Strengthened—Two New Revolutions Reported, One Having Backing of Huerta.

(By International News Service)

Washington, July 16—Secretary of War Garrison and General Wether- spoon, chief of staff, are considering the possibility of sending additional troops to Vera Cruz to cope with possible emergencies arising from the change of government. No immediate action is contemplated, but it is understood division commanders on the Texas border have been advised to be prepared for immediate movement.

General Funston's forces will be strengthened by marines from Admiral Badger's fleet. Pending the tryout of the new government no American ships will be withdrawn from Vera Cruz.

Must Prevent Anarchy.

The Constitutionalists must prevent disorder and anarchy in taking over Mexico City. Failing to act properly there will be no recognition of the new government by the American government. Positive word to this effect came out of the White House today. The White House emphasized the fact that Europe is looking to America for its cue regarding recognition of the Constitutionalists. Without such recognition the Carranza government cannot survive.

Huerta Backs New Revolt.

Vera Cruz, July 16—Reports of two new revolts mark the first day's experience under the new provisional government. One revolt is said to have the backing of Huerta.

Octavia Campero, Constitutional agent here, announced that Fidencio Hernandez, a former president of the Mexican congress has organized the Indians in the state of Oaxaca on behalf of Felix Diaz and that Huerta had turned over to Hernandez all the arms landed from the liner Ypiranga.

Campero declared that Huerta had ordered several battalions of regulars to cooperate with Hernandez. Campero is expecting the troops before Vera Cruz to join the revolt. The federal garrison at Tlaxiotalpan has declared for Felix Diaz. These Rebels are under Jefe gurru and have declared their intention to cooperate with Zapata.

May Take Huerta Aboard.

Puerto Mexico, Mexico, July 16—The German cruiser Dresden and the British cruiser Bristol arrived here today, enroute to Vera Cruz. They are anchored at points easily reached from the shore. Both are mentioned as possible refuges of Huerta, who is reported coming here on a special train.

This is the famous case in which Dr. Dickinson was charged with killing a male deer, the horns of which were alleged not to have been visible above the hair. This deer was killed in Clearfield county, the doctor a resident of Pittsburg, hunting with a party of friends from Clearfield.

Dr. Dickinson was arrested and Judge Searle, of Wayne county, hearing the decisions handed down by the state superior court on Wednesday was one reversing the order of the lower court in the case of the commonwealth against Dr. B. M. Dickinson.

This means that this famous case will again be heard in the Clearfield county court.

WHY?

Why not give somebody else a chance to speak of your good points?

Good evening! Fine evening to think of doing something to make Clearfield bigger and better.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.

Clearfield will issue bonds in the amount of thirty-eight thousand dollars, the funds derived from the sale to be used in making improvements in the borough. These improvements are absolutely necessary, comprising for the most part sewerage and paving. Clearfield is behind a number of the smaller towns in this section of the state, and it is not creditable to the town that it has not made greater progress in the matter of paving and sewerage.

The bids for the improvement bonds will be opened about the sixteenth of August. These bonds bear four per cent. interest, one per cent. higher than is paid by the banks for money deposited with them. Of the safety of an investment in these bonds nothing more need be said than that bonds issued by the borough of Clearfield are as good as those issued by any other municipality in the state. They are based on an actual assessed valuation of over three million dollars and are as safe as government bonds.

There is a large amount of money on deposit in the banks of Clearfield. The citizens to whom this money belongs could use some of it in the purchase of bonds of the borough. The banks, which have in the past taken great interest in the development of Clearfield, might take over a large number of these bonds as an investment and as proof that the banks have faith in the future progress of the borough. It is much to be preferred, however, that these bonds be purchased by individual citizens, since the citizens themselves will be benefited by the improvements which will be made by council.

With plenty of money in the community there should be a demand for bonds which are a perfectly safe investment. Curwensville and Philipsburg have recently sold four per cent. bonds readily. Clearfield is a more prosperous town than either of these boroughs, and it would be a reflection on the civic loyalty and pride of the citizens if the small amount of bonds offered should not be taken up by the individual citizens. When the citizens understand how safe these bonds are and that the improvements it is intended to make with the money derived from their sale will be beneficial not only to the borough, but to each individual citizen, it is expected that bids for the bonds will be received by the finance committee of councils far in excess of the amount of issue.

Consul Ben Chase's numerous friends in Clearfield county rejoice that he has again received recognition from the powers that be at Washington. Ben is going up higher in the consular line because he has proven that he is capable of doing things in the right way.

POWER OF JUDGES

They Alone Can Decide Who Shall Have Liquor Licenses.

The right of every judge of quarter sessions to refuse every liquor license application within the jurisdiction of his court, on the ground of "no necessity," was affirmed yesterday by the state superior court, sitting in Philadelphia.

This decision was made in refusing the appeal of liquor interests from the action of Judge George S. Criswell, who made Venango county dry last April by his sweeping refusal, under the Brooks law, to renew a single one of the twenty-three liquor licenses theretofore held in Venango county.

The opinion, written by President Judge Charles E. Rice holds

That the Brooks law does not make it imperative that some licenses shall be granted in every county of the state, just as it cannot be construed to mean that some licenses shall be granted in every municipal subdivision of the county.

That, inasmuch as the statute provides that the license court, on due consideration of a certain application can conclude that that license is not necessary, the fact that the same conclusion is reached in some other or all the other applications cannot be regarded by the appellate court as sufficient reason for impeaching the decision of the lower court.

That the demand for liquor by consumers is not the sole and conclusive test to be applied in determining whether a license is necessary.

ELKS ELECT OFFICERS

Raymond Benjamin Chosen Grand Exalted Ruler at Denver Meet.

Denver, Col., July 16—Raymond Benjamin, of Napa, Cal., was elected grand exalted ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Tuesday by acclamation.

Other officers elected are: Grand loyal knight, E. M. Dickerman, Tucson; Grand lecturing knight, W. F. Schad, Milwaukee; grand secretary, Frederick C. Robinson, Dubuque, Ia.; grand treasurer, Charles A. White, Chicago; grand inner guard, Thomas C. Donohue, New London, Conn.; grand trustee, Calvin Kingsley, Waterloo, Ia.; grand esteemed leading knight, L. R. Maxwell, Marshalltown, Ia.; grand tiler, B. F. Koperlik, Pueblo.

Pittsburgh and Pottsville Elks joined hands in the fight against Atlanta for the 1916 convention. The Elks from the Smoky City voted to a man for Los Angeles as the 1915 meeting place. It was declared that this was a shrewd political play to induce the western delegates to favor Pittsburgh for the next year.

Atlanta delegates are fighting furiously. The Southern delegates as a rule are lining up for the Dixie city.

IN THE MOVIES

"The Conspiracy," world's special film in four parts, is a forceful melodrama. The daughter of a rich banker intent on marrying a "title" concocts a diabolical plan to rid herself of her rival. The depth to which the conspirators descend to accomplish their fiendish purpose is graphically told. During the action of the play the spectator is carried through a succession of surprising episodes, culminating in a gigantic fire scene in which the arch villainess is consumed in the flames. The way of the transgressor is hard, but love and virtue triumph in the end. The play is intensely interesting from beginning to end and is only one of the many good things that the manager of the opera house has in store for Clearfield people this summer.

"Universal Ike and the Vampire" is a comedy that will be shown at the opera house this evening. Universal Ike and his many adventures with the world are amusing and popular. This is, if anything, the best of the series that have been shown. "Laugh and the world laughs with you," is true of Universal Ike at least, for when he laughs the audience laughs with him, and when he doesn't laugh they naturally laugh at him.

"Snow Drift" is a two reel North-western drama, with O. A. C. Lund and Barbara Tennant playing the leading parts. The story carries the action from the woods of Canada into a Fifth Avenue society club and the denouement is entirely unexpected. Several of the scenes were taken during a blinding snowstorm at Lake Placid, N. Y., and at Cobalt, Canada, and a wonderfully realistic effect is obtained. Mr. Lund had his right hand severely frozen during the making of the exterior scenes and the pain expressed on his face during the action of the story is not simulated. These pictures will be shown at the opera house this evening.

A new series of split-reel comedies from the famous "Buster Brown" cartoons will be launched by the Edison company. Norris Millington, who has played in juvenile roles with Viola Allen and Robert Bennett, the Mary Jane in the original production will appear in that role throughout the series. Charles France will be the director.

The twelfth series of "Lucile Love" was shown at the opera house last evening and was heartily welcomed by the audience. In spite of stiff opposition and hot weather this series never fails to attract a crowd, the story is so intensely interesting and so well acted that the audience applauded again and again as some exciting scene was shown.

Scheming and intrigue combatted by love and virtue.

Eggshell Football.

Make the football by making a tiny hole in each end of the shell and blowing out the contents, and then mark boundaries on the table field with tape or chalk, having two ends of the table for goals. Each side elects a captain, and then the fun begins. At a given signal both sides or teams begin to blow upon the eggshell, that has been placed in the center of the field. Each side tries, of course, to blow the egg toward his goal. No player must leave his place, and it is a most rigid rule never to move the ball by any other way than blowing. For so doing a player is sent from the field, as in the actual game. Regular football rules are used, and the score is kept as in the real game. Each of the two teams should have a name, either ridiculous or after some of the colleges or schools. This always adds interest to the contest. Old and young equally enjoy the game, especially if they understand football tactics and rules.

Apples of Olden Times.

Long, long ago Greece was famous for its fine apples, and in the apple season people ate them at every meal. They had one kind so choice that each person was allowed to eat only one a day, and he was punished if he disobeyed this law.

The early Romans, too, were very fond of this fruit and had many fine apple trees near Rome. They were always trying new kinds of grafting and named the results after their favorite generals. They are said to have had twenty-two varieties.

The druids cherished this tree not only for its fine fruit, but also for the mistletoe which grew on it.

In Wales the poets were rewarded for their beautiful songs by a wreath of apple sprays.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

"The king dead, Hare dead, and his daughter on the throne! How did she get here? And what the devil is a chap to do?" Bruce stooped and recovered his pipe and swore softly. "All, if this is true, then it's some devil work; and I'll wager my shooting eye that that sleek scoundrel Umballa, as they call him, is at the bottom of it. A white woman, good old Hare's daughter, I'll look into this."

The native who had spread this astounding news in Bruce's camp was already hastening back to the city, some 14 miles away. He had been a bhisti (water carrier) to the house of Ramabal up to the young banker's incarceration. To him, then, he carried the white hunter was coming hot-foot to the city. He turned and ran. Running was his business; he was as tireless as a camel and could run 20 and 30 miles at a stretch. The soles of his feet were as tough as elephant's hide. Thus he reached the city an hour before Bruce and Ramabal.

When Bruce and the native banker arrived at the gate coolies stood about with torches. Suddenly beyond the gate half a regiment drew up. The officer in charge raised his hand warningly.

"The white hunter is Bruce Sahib?" "Yes," Bruce spoke the dialects with passable fluency.

"Good. The sahib will be pleased to him."

"I am on my way to the palace." "That is impossible, sahib." At a sign from the officer the troops extended their guns at half aim. It was a necessary precaution. These white sahibs were generally a mad people and were quick to shoot. "Please dismount, sahib. It is the orders."

Two troopers stepped forward and took possession of the rifles which were slung on each side of the howdah. Bruce accepted the situation philosophically; argument or protest was futile. Next they took away his cartridge belt. He trembled for a moment with apprehension, but the troopers did not search him further; and he thanked God for the wisdom which had made him strap his revolvers under his armpits.

"What now?" he demanded. "The sahib will be given his guns and ammunition the hour he starts back to camp."

"And in the meantime?" "The sahib is free to come and go about the city so long as he does not approach the palace. If he is found in the vicinity of the zenana he will be arrested and imprisoned."

"This is all very high handed." "Sahib, there is no British raj here. The orders of the regent and the Council are final. Submit."

"Very well."

"Ramabal!" Ramabal stepped forward. By a kind of clairvoyance he saw what was coming.

"Ramabal, the orders are that you shall retire to your house and remain there till further orders."

"I am the queen's bodyguard." "Al! Well said! But I do not take my orders from the queen—yet. Obey. The sahib may accompany you if he wishes, there are no orders against that."

"We have been betrayed," said Ramabal. "I know not how."

"You were followed. A moment," said Bruce, turning to the officer. "I have a servant by the name of Rao. I believe he acted as bearer to the young lady at the palace. What has become of him?"

The officer smiled and shook his head.

"Rao is a prisoner, then," thought the young man. "That black scoundrel Umballa is at least thorough." Aloud he said: "We shall go at once to your house, Ramabal."

And all through the night they planned and planned, but not knowing where the first ordeal was to take place, nor the hour, they found themselves going round in a circle, getting nowhere. To a man of action like Bruce it was maddening.

He slept a little before dawn, and was aroused by voices below. He listened.

"I am Jawahir Lal, the water carrier. Each day at dawn I water the garden of Ramabal to pay a debt."

Bruce looked toward Ramabal, who slept the sleep of the profoundly wearied. A bhisti; perhaps a messenger.

"Go around to the rear gate, which can be opened," said the trooper.

Bruce went to the window overlooking the garden. He saw the water carrier enter through the bamboo gate, heard the water slosh about jerkily as the bhisti emptied his goatskin. He watched the man curiously; saw him drop the skin and tiptoe toward the house, glance right and left alertly. Then he disappeared. Presently at the head of the stairs Bruce heard a whisper—"Ramabal!"

"Who is it?" Bruce whispered in the dialect.

"Ahmed."

"Ahmed. Who was Ahmed?" Bruce shook Ramabal. "Ahmed is here. Who is he?" he asked softly.

"Ahmed?" drowsily. Then, wide awake enough. "Ahmed? He was Hare Sahib's head animal man. Where is he?"

"Hush! Not so loud. Come up, Ahmed, I am Bruce. Let us speak in English."

"Good!" Ahmed came into the chamber. "To see Bruce Sahib is good. Tomorrow my master's daughter is to be carried into the jungle. The memsahib is to be tied inside a tiger trap, bait for the cat. That is the first ordeal."

"Shaitan!" murmured Ramabal.

"Go on, Ahmed."

"The cage will be set near the old peepul tree, not far from the south gate. Now, you sahib, and you, Ramabal, must hide somewhere near. It is the law that if she escapes the ordeal from unexpected sources she is free, at least till the second ordeal. I know not what that is at present or when it is to take place. The troops will be there, and the populace, the Council, the priests, and Umballa. I shall have two swift camels near the clump of bamboo. I may not be there, but some one will. She must be hurried off before the confusion dies away. Must, sahib. There must be no second ordeal."

"But how am I to get out of here?" asked Ramabal. "Guards all about, and doubtless hidden to shoot if I stir!"

"Tch! Tch!" clicked Ahmed. He unwound his dirty turban and slipped out of the ragged shirtlike frock.

"These and the water skin below. A bhisti entered, a bhisti goes out. What is simpler than that? It is not light enough for the soldiers to notice."

"Ahmed," said Bruce, holding out his hand, "you're a man."

"Thanks, sahib," drily. "But hasten! At dawn tomorrow, or late tonight, Ramabal returns with a full water skin. The memsahib must at least stand the ordeal of terror, for she is guarded too well. Yet, if they were not going to bind her, I should not worry. She has animal magic in her eye, in her voice. I have seen wild beasts grow still when she spoke. Who knows? Now, I sleep."

Bruce and Ramabal had no difficulty in passing the guards. They wisely made a wide detour to the peepul tree, which they climbed, disturbing the apes and the parakeets.

Somewhere near 3 o'clock they heard the creaking of wheels and a murmur of voices. Shortly into the range of vision drew a pair of bullocks, pulling a tiger trap toward the clearing.

When Bruce saw this damnable thing he understood, and he shook with horror and voiceless rage. He caught Ramabal by the arm so savagely that a low cry came from the brown man's lips.

"Patience, sahib!" he warned. "Without you what will the memsahib do? They will tie her in that and liberate a tiger. The rest lies with you, sahib."

"Ramabal, as God hears me, some one shall pay for this!"

"Hush!" again warned Ramabal, hugging his perch.

Later by half an hour Bruce witnessed a spectacle such as few white men, happily for their reason, are permitted to see. Kathlyn, in her royal robes (for ordeals of this character were ceremonial), a necklace of wonderful emeralds about her throat, stepped from her palanquin and stood waiting. From other vehicles and conveyances stepped Umballa, the Council, and the yellow-robed priests.

He saw the bejeweled turban of Umballa bend toward the girl, and it was hard to resist taking a pot at the men. Kathlyn shook her head. Thereupon she was led to the trap, her hands bound, and the rope round her waist attached securely to the ring.

Ah, they talked about it that night in the surging bazaars. In the palace, wherever two persons came together, how the white hunter had appeared from nowhere, rushed toward the trap as the tiger approached, entered and dropped the door, blazed away at the beast, who turned tail and limped off into the jungle. Al! It was a sight for eyes. They could laugh behind Umballa's back, the gutter born, the iron-heeled upstart, they could riddle (confidentially) the Council with rude jests. The law was the law, and none, not even the priests in their shaven polls and yellow robes, might slip beyond the law as it read. The first ordeal was over. Nor, as the law read, could they lay hands upon this brave young man. Al! It was good. Umballa must look elsewhere for his chief wife.

On the night before the ordeal men moved cautiously about the elephant arena. It was only after much persuasion and argument could Bruce hold the men. At the testing of Lal Singh's wires and batteries they had started to fly. This was devil's fire.

At the end of the arena, in a box which Bruce was to occupy, by order of the Council (where they proposed to keep an eye upon him and Umballa to wring his heart), the key to the wires was laid. This box was directly over a wooden canopy where the mahouts loafed between fights. Back of this canopy was a door which led outside. Through this Bruce proposed to lead Kathlyn during the confusion created by the explosion.

On the day of the ordeal only the bedridden remained at home.

When Kathlyn arrived she was placed under the canopy; another bit of kindly attention on the part of Umballa to twist the white man's heart. But nothing could have happened more to the satisfaction of Bruce.

"Kathlyn Hare," he called out softly in Spanish, "do you hear and understand me?"

"Yes," she replied in the same tongue. "Do nothing desperate. Don't throw away your life. I have a sister in America. Will you tell her?"

"Listen. Under no circumstances leave the canopy. The lions come only to go to rescue but save you. Attend me carefully. Behind you is a door. There will be an explosion in the center of the arena. There was to be another under our friend Umballa, but the battery was old. Press toward that door. I have the key."

"Ah, Mr. Bruce!"

"Kathlyn, my name is John."

"The Hons, the Hons!" howled the populace.

The great, jawny African brutes blinked and turned their shaggy heads this way and that, uneasily. Kathlyn stood very still. How, how could they save her? At length the Hons espied her, attracted by the white of her robe. One bounded forward, growling. The others immediately started in pursuit.

Suddenly the center of the arena opened and a tremendous roar followed. A low wall of terror ran round the arena. Surely this memsahib had all the gods with her. A great service had opened up between Kathlyn and the lions, one of which lay dead. There came the rush toward the exits, a mad, frantic rush. Not even Umballa, who knew that not the gods but man had contrived this havoc, not even Umballa waited, but fled, beating down all those who blocked his path.

Bruce and Ramabal dropped over the railing to Kathlyn's side. But the key upon which their escape depended would not unlock the door.

the memsahib would not adorn his zenana.

"Thank you," Kathlyn had said. "Somehow I knew you would come." And what she had seen in his eyes had made her tremble visibly for the first time that day.

She was conducted back to the palace. The populace howled and cheered about her palanquin to the very gates. Not in many a big rain had they had such excitement.

The fury in Umballa's heart might have disquieted Bruce had he known of its existence.

Kathlyn, arriving in her chamber, flung herself down upon her cushions and lay there like one dead, nor would she be comforted by the worshipping Pundita. Bruce had saved her this time, but it was not possible that he could repeat the feat.

Having convinced Umballa and the council that she would not marry her persecutor, the council announced to the populace that on the next fete day the queen would confront the lions in the elephant arena. What could one man do against such odds? Lions brought from the far Nubian deserts, fierce, untamable.

That night there was a conference between Bruce, Ahmed and Ramabal. "They have taken my guns away, and God knows I can't do the impossible. Where the devil were your camels, Ahmed?"

"Umballa has his spies, Ramabal," said Ahmed, smiling, as he got into his bhisti rags, which Ramabal had surrendered willingly enough. "Ramabal, thou conspirator, what about the powder mines you and your friends hid when the late King signified that he was inclined toward British protection? Eh? What about the republic thou hadst dreams of? Poor fool! It is in our blood to be ruled by kings, oppressed; we should not know what to do with absolute freedom. There! Fear not. Why should I betray thee? The mines. The arena is of wood."

"But there will be many of my friends there," said the bewildered Ramabal. Who was this strange man who seemed to know everything?

"Put the mines in the center of the arena. What we want is merely terror and confusion. Pour! Bang! There's your miracle. And a little one under the royal pavilion. And Umballa and the council sleep in Shaitan's arms. Welcome, my lambs!" And Ahmed laughed noiselessly.

"By the Lord!" gasped Bruce. "But the fuses? No, no, Ahmed, it cannot be done."

"In the house of my friend Lal Singh there is a cellar full of strange magic—magic with copper wires that spit blue fires. Eh, sahib? You and I know, we have traveled."

"Batteries, here, in this wilderness?" "Even so. To you, Ramabal, the powder to me, the spitting wires, to you, Bruce Sahib, patience. Umballa shall yet wear raw the soles of his feet in the treadmill."

On the night before the ordeal men moved cautiously about the elephant arena. It was only after much persuasion and argument could Bruce hold the men. At the testing of Lal Singh's wires and batteries they had started to fly. This was devil's fire.

CHAPTER V.

The Flight From the Arena.

When Bruce dropped down into the arena to Kathlyn's side he had never given a thought to the possibility of the key not being the right one.

Trapped!—and with Ahmed but a few yards away with a senana gharri ready to convey them to the camp freedom! It took the heart out of him for a moment. The confusion all about, the pall of dust, the roaring of the frightened lions which had escaped destruction, the shrill cries of the panic-stricken populace, who now looked upon the white memsahib as the daughter of Shaitan, these dulled his inventive faculties for the nonce. Here was the confusion, properly planned, and he could not make use of it. Possibly when no further explosion shook the air, the mob and the soldiers would return out of curiosity. And then, good-by!

But the sight of a lion emerging from the murky wrong side of the crevasse roused him thoroughly.

"Save yourself!" cried Kathlyn in despair; "there is no possible way of saving me. I have never in all my life injured any one, and yet God makes me go through all this."

"Run!"

Bruce laughed; it was that kind of laughter with which men enter battle. He drew Lal Singh's revolver and thrust one into her hand.

"Shoot at the keyhole. Leave the lion to me. With the pandemonium no one will note the shots, or if they do, will think that more explosions are on the way. I'll get you out of this nightmare; that's what I was born for."

"Nightmare!"

"There, now!"—as Kathlyn leaned dizzily against one of the supports.

"I've gone through a good deal," she said without more ado she pressed the muzzle of the revolver into the keyhole and fired. She heard a shot behind her, another and another, but she kept on firing into and about the keyhole till the revolver was empty.

A firm hand drew her aside.

"The lion?"

"Gone to sleep. Let me have a whack at that door."

"Where's Ramabal?"

"Went back over the wall. Probably to warn Ahmed; maybe gone directly off toward camp. Anyhow, he has faith in me."

"And, O! so have I, so have I!"

Bruce bore his weight savagely against the door—once, twice, thrice; and pitched forward on his knees, outside. He was up instantly. He caught Kathlyn by the hand and hurried her along; and all she could think of was Winnie romping toward the canopied veranda, and the leopard cat sprawled on the ditan.

"Sahib! Huzoor!" a voice called. "This way!"

Little Harold was sent to a neighbor's house on an errand. In due time he came back and was questioned by his mother what Mrs. Glichris folks were doing. "They had company, and they were all talking in German," answered the lad, "but I couldn't tell what language they were laughing in."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening hair, streaked and faded hair in grandmother's treatment, and tells are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite as valuable, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy."

For about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb of a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides, beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

HAD NO SENSE OF HUMOR.

He Couldn't Clearly See the Joke the Boys Had on Him.

Some people have absolutely no sense of humor. A little London urchin ran into a baker's shop and, placing a half-penny on the counter, asked nervously and timidly, "Mister, have you a 'alfpenny buster (bun)?"

"Yes, my little man. Here is one quite hot."

"Thanks, mister. Would you mind a-shovin' it down my back?"

"Down your back, my little man! Why down your back?"

"Cos, sir, I'm only a little un, and if those chaps outside know I've a buster they'll take it, and I am so 'ungry, I am."

"Dear me, how wrong of them! Come round here, my little chap. There—there, it is down your back."

The boy ran off. In an instant another entered—a bigger boy.

"I say, mister, 'as a little boy just been in 'ere?"

"Yes."

"And did 'e buy a 'alfpenny buster?"

"Yes."

"And did 'e arse you to shove it down 'is back, as us big fellows would take it?"

"Yes."

"Yah! Where's your watch and chain? 'E's got 'em. 'E's just round the corner."

Out rushed the baker. In a trice the big boy collared the till and bolted.

The shopman never saw the comic side of the transaction at all.—London Strand Magazine.

NATIONAL SANDWICHES.

Russian.—Slice some cold roast venison and spread over it a paste made of hard boiled egg yolks, rubbed with butter; season with pepper, salt and minced celery and serve on round pieces of bread.

German.—Steam veal-wursts about ten minutes, skin and turn into a meat dish; mix with finely chopped onion and enough tomato catsup to moisten; lay thickly between buttered slices of brown bread.

Irish.—Cream half a cup of butter and put a teaspoonful of ground mustard seed, a shake of pepper and a little chopped parsley in it. Chop together hard cooked eggs and roast pork or boiled ham, mix with the butter dressing and spread on thin slices of bread.

Yankee.—Mince sturgeon, hard cooked eggs, water cress, parsley or lettuce with French mustard; spread this on nutmeg dusted, buttered slices of bread.

Scotch.—Blend three tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of prepared mustard, salt, pepper and yolk of egg; stir into this minced lamb, lay on rye bread cut thin and buttered.

Parisian.—Mince turtle meat, terrapin or frogs' legs which have been cooked, mix with mayonnaise dressing and spread on lettuce leaves, put between slices of French bread, cut thin and well buttered.

Bohemian.—Chop up very fine any kind of wild fowl, bird or game meat that has been boiled or roasted. Put it in a saucepan with sufficient gravy to soften it; add a piece of butter, pepper, celery and mild spices; while heating, mix these ingredients to a smooth paste; when cold spread on slices of stale bread. A few drops of lemon juice squeezed over the sandwich before putting the slices together improves the sandwich.

Scandinavian.—Fresh herring, cooked or smoked may be used, pounded with hard cooked egg yolks in a mortar, season with salt, pepper and cream; spread on buttered biscuits.

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Lemon Juice.

Lemon juice will:

Prevent diphtheria.

Cure a sore throat or cough.

Cure a fever.

Drive away a sick headache.

Cure malaria.

Beautify the complexion.

Make the hair fluffy.

For a sore throat, gargle with pure, undiluted, unsweetened lemon juice.

For a cough or cold mix equal parts of lemon juice and strained honey, and take a tablespoonful every hour.

For a sick headache mix one part lemon juice and two parts boiling water and sip a teaspoonful as hot as possible every two hours.

For malaria mix the juice of half a lemon with two tablespoonfuls of water and a little sugar and drink three times a day.

For a felon cut off the end of a lemon, stick the finger into the hole and bind it on. Let it stay for a day or two, when it will be ready to lance.

For the complexion mix equal parts of rose water and glycerin and dip a cut lemon into this and rub the face with it. After it dries rub with cold cream.

For the hair add the juice of a lemon to the last rinsing water of a shampoo.

CHEERFUL PATIENCE.

Patience and cheerfulness work wonders. One of the hardest and yet one of the most useful lessons we can ever learn is to smile and wait after we have done our best. He is not a philosopher who has not learned the secret of smiling and waiting. A great many people can smile at difficulties who cannot wait, who lack patience, but the man who can both smile and wait, if he has the tenacity of purpose which never turns back, will surely win.

One on Father.

A young minister preached one Sunday to a rural congregation and spent the next day visiting the people. At one house the man of the house was expressing his appreciation of the sermon in very complimentary terms while assisting the minister to put up his team. His little son had followed him and after eyeing the minister a minute or two exclaimed: "Why, papa, you said he was a one hoss preacher, but he's got two hosses!"—National Monthly.

The Railroad Clerk.

I want to be a railroad clerk

And draw his princely pay,

Where all I'll have to do is work

Some eighteen hours a day.

I'd like to join those happy guys

With hearts so full of cheer,

Who overstrain their weary eyes

Six hundred days a year.

I want to be a railroad clerk.

I'm very fond of toll;

In fact I fairly love to work

While burning midnight oil.

Such things as sleep I truly hate,

I much prefer to pore

O'er way-bills in triplicate

And heaped up by the score.

I want to be a railroad clerk

And work from dawn to dark;

I really do not care to lurk

Of evening's in the park.

I'd rather sit upon a stool

And scratch with busy pen,

For that's the way—so says the rule

With all successful men.

I want to be a railroad clerk,

For that's the way to climb;

I will not lag, I will not shirk,

But labor all the time.

I will not mind the strain and stress,

So, if you'll take me on,

You'll find me at this plain address,

Ward Seven, Mattawan.

—By S. P. G. 'n' 'le—in Exchange.

If the railroads of the United States had paid $10,000 the maximum amount fixed by law as damages for death, for every life they took during the year which ended June 30, they would have paid $101,500,000.

The records of the interstate commerce commission show that for the year just ended there were 10,150 killed. More than 190,000 were injured during the same period.

The figures as to the number killed and injured indicate the railroads are more deadly than war, pestilence and famine combined.

More than 210,000 persons have been killed on American railroads during the last twenty-five years and more than 2,000,000 injured. Figure that out and see what it means to families left dependent, bereaved and their futures changed, to insurance companies and to the railroads themselves, and you will not wonder that the interstate commerce commission is taking the matter seriously.

Shriner's Social Train.

Local Pennsylvania railroad officials Sunday made arrangements for the movement from here of a special train, next Thursday, to carry the Shriner's of Jaffa temple to the big ceremonial session to be held at Coudersport.

The special will leave here at 1 10 P. M., Thursday, pick-up Shriners at all stopping points, Tyrone, Lock Haven, Emporium Junction and Port Allegheny, arriving at Coudersport at 7 that evening.

Returning, the special will leave Coudersport for Altoona at 1 o'clock Saturday morning and arrive here at 7:30 the same morning.—Altoona Tribune.

Efficiency Tests.

Efficiency tests for June on the Middle division of the Pennsylvania numbered 28,493. Only four trainmen were found deficient, giving the division percentage of 99.9. There were 171 surprise tests made. Two engineers failed to hear torpedoes and one engine man ran past a block signal. He was suspended for two weeks. Inspectors also made 28,332 observations and only one employee was found deficient. A brakeman had failed to protect the rear of his train and was reprimanded.

Hauling Heavy Trains.

The B. & P. management are making some extensive experiments on Clarion hill along the line of power and tonnage. They have been able during the past week to increase the number of tons to each train largely. One of their Mikado engines with a pusher handled easily 2200 tons from Clarion Junction to Freeman. For the first trial the same power was given 2400 tons which it handled with apparent ease. However when the loading was increased to 2600 tons it stalled at Kerner, which is about six miles north of Clarion Junction. The B. & P. are expecting to receive this week the first of an order of several Mallet articulated compound locomotives for trial on the mountain.

To Accommodate Public.

Acting on requests received from a number of business men of Punxsutawney, the P. R. R. has made arrangements to have its early East-bound train on the Low Grade wait at Falls Creek for the early B. & P. train leaving Punxsutawney.

Heretofore the Pennsylv train left Falls Creek at about the same time that the northbound train came in from Punxsutawney. As a result of the exceedingly close connection, parties of eastbound travelers often were unable to make the transfer.

Sees Prosperity Ahead.

W. T. Noonan, president of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, in an interview asserts that the country not only is on the verge of great activity, but that it is going to experience the longest period of prosperity it ever enjoyed. He believes recent conditions, especially as applying to railroads, have been caused by "uncertainty" relative to state and national legislation. He thinks, however, that the bugaboo of the legislative bodies has been exaggerated.

Still at Work on Grades.

A corps of civil engineers employed by the New York Central Railroad company, who have been employed near Renovo for some time, are now at work in this section. They have headquarters at the Hotel Russell and are now working eastward toward Youngdale. The presumption is that they are still at work on grades for the new river branch from Keating to

Avia, but are reticent regarding any such—Lock Haven Express

Pennry Officials Clear.

President Samuel Rea, of the Pennsylvania railroad, and T. DeWitt Cuyler, a director in that company, are both directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, in which the Pennsylvania railroad now has a large interest. Neither was a director of the New Haven, however, at the time when the transactions criticized by the interstate commerce commission in its report to congress were consummated. Mr. Rea and Mr. Cuyler were not elected to the New Haven board until the later part of 1910

Getting Ready for Camp.

Notice to Advertisers!

A new rate for advertising will be in effect on Saturday, August 1st, 1914, and copies of this rate in pamphlet form will be ready for distribution August 20, 1914. ¶ This new rate is made necessary by the greatly increased circulation, and cost of publication of the Progress. The present circulation is about five times larger than a year ago. ¶ Many new features have been, and will be added, such as "Bud" Fisher's "Mutt and Jeff," a daily news illustration service, a free cut, or illustration service for advertisers, (proofs of which may be obtained at this office), and last but not least, our daily news service; all of which will make the Daily Progress a real up to the minute daily. ¶ The Progress goes into nearly every home in Clearfield and has an excellent circulation in most of the homes throughout the surrounding country, so that the new rate will not meet with much, if any disapproval.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 "rat" of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

James Staver entertained several of his little friends yesterday afternoon in honor of his third birthday, at his home on Walnut street, from 4 until 5 o'clock. The children played games until they were ushered into the dining room, which, as one of the little tots so aptly put it, "looked just as though a fairy had come while you were sleeping and fixed it."

The table was decorated with a cake in the middle with three pink candles; other candles with pink shades were placed at each end of it, a brown eyed susan lay at each child's place with a pin to fasten it on with a bouquet of beautiful flowers stood on the side table and green vines were woven through the back of each chair. Delicious refreshments were served. He was the recipient of several very pretty presents.

The guests were Misses Doris Patterson, Leah and Jean Taylor, Eleanor Stauffer, Louise Mitchell, Gertrude Leap, Pauline Fleck, Dorothy Logan and Albert Adams.

Miss Alice Dill has issued invitations for a progressive euchre party to begive Friday, July 17, in honor of the Patton house party.

HUERTA RULE IS AT AN END

Carbajal is Now Provisional President of Mexico

TRYING TO PREVENT RIOTING

Madera Leaders Will Cooperate With Americans in Preserving Peace—Other Foreigners Warned to Remain in Their Homes—Carbajal Acceptable to General Carranza Under Certain Conditions—Fear That Zapata Rebels Will Try to Loot Mexico City.

(By International News Service)
Mexico City, July 16—General Victoriano Huerta, provisional president of Mexico resigned at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Francisco Carbajal, minister of foreign affairs, will act as provisional president until a president is elected. The resignation.

Huerta presented his resignation as president of the republic to the chamber of deputies last evening, through the department of foreign relations. The resignation was referred to a committee, after it had been read.

The deputies and spectators who filled the galleries shouted "Viva Huerta!"

At 7:20 o'clock last evening Francisco Carbajal took the oath of president before the assembled deputies and senators.

The new executive, escorted by the presidential guards, went immediately to the national palace. He was cheered by the people.

All members of the Huerta cabinet have tendered their resignations.

The First News.

The newspapers story of Huerta's resignation was the first intimation the great mass of people here had that the dictator's regime had passed with Francisco Carbajal succeeding as president.

Will Help to Prevent Rioting.

The news caused no perceptible change in the capital's daily life. With soldiers patrolling principle streets the night passed quietly. The troops and police are redoubting their efforts to prevent a possible outbreak today.

The Madero leaders endorse Carbajal and will urge Carranza to cooperate with the Americans in maintaining peace. Other foreigners are advised to remain indoors. Should a reign of terror develop the international squadrons on the east coast are likely to rush marines to the scene.

Carranza Acquiesces.

Saltillo, Mexico, July 16—General Carranza is willing to abide by the tenure of provisional President Carbajal, provided it is but a step to the final triumph of the revolution. Upon the first sign of dicker or treachery Carranza will complete the capture of the capital. This was made plain by Carranza's confidants here.

May Leave Under Escort.

Washington, July 16—Rear admiral Badger reported to the navy department last night that reports reaching Vera Cruz said General Huerta and General Blanquet would "leave Mexico City by train under escort." There was no mention of destination, but officials here think the retired dictator will go to Puerto Mexico to board a foreign man-of-war for Europe.

Word also came that the special train with members of the families of Huerta and Blanquet are proceeding to Puerto Mexico. Advice received here report that they passed Cordoba at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, taking the Vera Cruz Isthmus railroad.

Assault on Mexico City.

Washington, July 16—Generals Ob-

regon and Gonzales will lead, and Villa will support the final assault on Mexico City.

This is the information received here by Constitutionalists representatives yesterday. It indicates, they say, that Villa is now willing to assume a subordinate position to emphasize that the Constitutionalists are again a unit. Preparations for a forward movement they say are complete, and only wait arrival of needed ammunition for Obregon's army. This will be rushed to him at once from Tampica, the schooner Sunshine, with an enormous cargo aboard, having docked there last night.

Fear a Zapata Raid.

If Huerta and Blanquet leave the capital officials say the last restraining force which can prevent looting will be eliminated. They fear this will be the signal for a Zapata raid. The bandit is near the capital with a large force. He has wanted to raid it for many months. Carranza has alleged that Zapata will act with him. If he does the situation will be simplified; if not, and foreigners suffer, the United States is very likely to be held responsible.

Word has been sent to Carranza to protect foreigners in Mexico City at all hazards. It is hoped that if Huerta flees the Constitutionalists will rush his forces to the capital with all possible speed. If he does so, and looting is prevented, then a final satisfactory settlement can be quickly reached.

MANY APPLICATIONS FOR PEDAGOGUE JOBS

Pass Examination For Provisional Certificates

The examinations for provisional teachers certificates closed on Monday, July 13. There were 370 applicants for certificates and 348 were granted. Many of those who took the examination were High school graduates. James Weber, the valedictorian of the class of 1914 at the Clearfield High school, ranked highest in the list when the papers were corrected.

There were 72 applicants for professional certificates in the townships this being the largest class in years. Fifty-seven certificates were granted. The permanent examination was held in Brookville and 7 certificates were granted.

There are 537 schools in the county. Many of the teachers employed are normal graduates, and each year more school boards are demanding that their teachers have normal training. There are a great many more teachers applying for schools this year than will be needed. This gives an opportunity to the directors to choose those who are best fitted for the work. There is surely no need of employing teachers who cannot perform successfully the work of teaching a school when there are so many to choose from

(By International News Service)
Washington, July 16—Official Washington was given cause for anxiety this morning when it was announced that President Woodrow Wilson is suffering from indigestion.

He has cancelled all engagements and is confined to his bed. Dr. Grayson is in attendance at the president's bedside.

While the president's trouble is not regarded as serious and he may be able to resume work tomorrow, his official family display considerable concern over his condition.

The president's illness followed his attendance at a birthday dinner given at the home of Secretary of Interior Lane last evening.

Company Expects to Submit Statement About August 4—Borough Council Holds Long Session at Which Many Matters are Discussed and Some Business Transacted.

Borough council discussed a wide range of subjects at the regular session Wednesday evening. The actual business transacted consisted of authorizing Dr. Reiley, president of the board of health, to purchase equipment for the analyzing of the milk and water offered for consumption in Clearfield; directing placing of crossings and arranging for constructing at least one sanitary sewer.

Prior to the meeting of council Daniel Rhinesmith was sworn in by the burgess as a councilman from the Third ward, having been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Abram Tate. Mr. Rhinesmith will serve till January, 1916, his successor being chosen at the election in November, 1915.

Money for Firemen.

Burgess Callahan made a number of recommendations regarding sidewalks and turned in a check for $350, license fees collected. The firemen will receive $54.60 as their share of the license fees granted on the Fourth of July.

The borough treasurer reported a balance of $5833.31 in the various funds of the borough.

Among the bills read and ordered paid was one of $110 for printing the improvement bonds and one of $2 for repairing the stop watch used in timing automobile drivers.

Expert Now at Work.

A letter was received from the Clearfield Water company in which it was stated that the company's expert accountant is at work on the books of the company and that he would be able to give the company a report in time to enable it to transmit to council the data desired as to the cost of construction and maintenance of the water plant, about August 4.

It was decided that the only solution to the difficulty on Hannah street was the construction of a sanitary sewer letting the property owners attend to their house drains as best they can.

A number of sidewalks were reported in bad condition. The West Side M. E. church trustees will be directed to raise the walk in front of that building.

Impure Milk and Water.

Dr. Reiley, president of the board of health, was authorized to purchase an equipment and material necessary to the analyzing of the milk and water consumed in the borough. It was stated by Mr. Heck that there are four cases of typhoid fever in town and that the disease had been traced to the milk sold here.

Property owners on South Second street will be notified to set their curbs and gutters preparatory to the repaving of that thoroughfare.

The playgrounds matter was discussed at some length, councilmen being in favor of helping the ladies in their laudable purpose of having a playground in each of the four wards of the borough. An article on this subject will be found in another column.

A general and extended discussion of the work done by the B. R. P. railroad on Nichols street resulted in the proposition that members of council visit the scene and examine into what had been done and what should be done to complete the work.

The plans for the new Fourth ward fire house were examined, but no action taken.

UNJUST RULE BY COMMISSION

Burdensome Conditions Prevent Building of a Bridge

TO REPAIR OLD STRUCTURE

Water Supply Commission Asked the Commissioners of Clearfield and Center Counties to Condemn Property and Expend Large Amount of Money in Erection of New Bridge, and Project Was Abandoned.

A joint meeting of the county commissioners of Center and Clearfield counties was held at the Sheffer hotel Phillipsburg, Wednesday, to take up the question of a bridge over Moshannon creek at Presque Isle street. The subject of repairing the old bridge or building a new one has been under consideration for some time, and several months ago the later course was decided upon. Approval of the state water supply commission became necessary and plans were submitted to it in detail last April. Their decision on the matter was not reached until their July meeting, and word of the decision was received by the commissioners at the end of last week.

Project Abandoned.

The water supply commission approved the plans submitted for a two span bridge, but coupled the same with such conditions and qualifications that the project has had to be abandoned. Conditions imposed upon the counties would have involved the condemnation of a considerable stretch of Presque Isle street, for a third span, would have involved the counties in a probable expenditure of many thousands of dollars to pay damages to property owners, and would have caused additional delay if the requirements of the commission were met. In addition those requirements compelled the commissioners to guarantee the performance of certain conditions by the authorities of Chester Hill borough, which was beyond the power and jurisdiction of county commissioners. The latter condition related to the street or road on the Chester Hill side of the bridge.

Will Repair Old Bridge.

The imperative need of some way of crossing the creek without further delay, together with the burdensome conditions of the water supply commission, caused the abandonment of the proposed new bridge. Plans are now under way for the permanent repair of the present structure, and it is expected that work will be begun upon it within a couple of weeks. On account of the serious illness of J. H. Wetzel, E. W. Hess, of Clearfield, was appointed engineer in charge of construction, and some opportunity will be given him to go over the plans and specifications before work is actually started. The commissioners of the two counties were prepared to proceed with construction of the new bridge, and only the conditions imposed by the department at Harrisburg caused them to abandon that project.

Special to the Progress.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 16—Miss Elizabeth Mitchell, of Clearfield, was one of seven bridesmaids Tuesday evening in Cortland, N. Y., at the marriage of Miss Dorothy Bard Gillette, of Cortland to Leon Barnes Stanford, also of Cortland, Rev. Carl M. Scovel, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Stephen A. Lloyd, rector of the First Congregational church, Cortland. Miss Mignonette Dick, Wilkes-Barre, and Miss Edith Troup, of Harrisburg, also were bridesmaids. After August 1 Mr. and Mrs. Stanford will reside permanently in Cortland where the groom is superintendent of the F. H. Cobb company.

FIVE CREWS RESTORED

Slight Pickup of Business on B. R. & P. Railway is Indicated.

Four new crews have been restored to duty on the B. R. & P. railway out of Punksutawney, and one new one has been put on at DuBois. This would indicate that business is picking up, slowly, perhaps, but surely.

Two additional crews will likely be restored to the Indiana branch within a few days. The coal business is picking up gradually, and there is some prospect of steady work at a few of the mines.

COUNCIL ASKED TO AID PLAYGROUND PROJECT

Womans Club Plan to Have Them in Every Ward

At the sessions of borough council last evening it was announced that the ladies in charge of the playground movement in Clearfield are desirous of having playgrounds in each of the wards of the town and asked council to appropriate $150 toward the purchase of the necessary equipment.

Members of council expressed their approval of the playground idea and were ready to vote the desired money, but as there is an act of assembly governing the appropriation of money to such purposes it was decided to postpone action until the borough solicitor had learned just what this act of assembly provided.

The Woman's club is planning to establish a play ground in the lower part of Witmer park this summer. Mrs. Philip Reed, the chairman of the playground committee, who so ably supervised last year's playground, will have charge of the establishment of this year's and two girls will be hired by the Woman's club to assist her.

The object is to establish a place where the children will be kept off of the street and taught to play. Stories will be told and games played. The playground will be open every afternoon.

GOVERNMENT DEMANDS ORDER

Commanders on Texas Border Advised to Have Troops in Readiness to Move on Short Notice—Funston's Forces to be Strengthened—Two New Revolts Reported, One Having Backing of Huerta.

(By International News Service)

Washington, July 16—Secretary of War Garrison and General Wether- spoon, chief of staff, are considering the possibility of sending additional troops to Vera Cruz to cope with possible emergencies arising from the change of government. No immediate action is contemplated, but it is understood division commanders on the Texas border have been advised to be prepared for immediate movement.

General Funston's forces will be strengthened by marines from Admiral Badger's fleet. Pending the tryout of the new government no American ships will be withdrawn from Vera Cruz.

Must Prevent Anarchy.

The Constitutionalists must prevent disorder and anarchy in taking over Mexico City. Failing to act properly there will be no recognition of the new government by the American government. Positive word to this effect came out of the White House today. The White House emphasized the fact that Europe is looking to America for its cue regarding recognition of the Constitutionalists. Without such recognition the Carranza government cannot survive.

Huerta Backs New Revolt.

Vera Cruz, July 16—Reports of two new revolts mark the first day's experience under the new provisional government. One revolt is said to have the backing of Huerta.

Octavia Campero, Constitutional agent here, announced that Fidencio Hernandez, a former president of the Mexican congress has organized the Indians in the state of Oaxaca on behalf of Felix Diaz and that Huerta had turned over to Hernandez all the arms landed from the liner Ypiranga.

Campero declared that Huerta had ordered several battalions of regulars to cooperate with Hernandez. Campero is expecting the troops before Vera Cruz to join the revolt. The federal garrison at Tlaxiotalpan has declared for Felix Diaz. These Rebels are under Jefe gurru and have declared their intention to cooperate with Zapata.

May Take Huerta Aboard.

Puerto Mexico, Mexico, July 16—The German cruiser Dresden and the British cruiser Bristol arrived here today, enroute to Vera Cruz. They are anchored at points easily reached from the shore. Both are mentioned as possible refuges of Huerta, who is reported coming here on a special train.

NEW TRIAL IS GRANTED IN DR. DICKINSON CASE

ing the decisions handed down by the state superior court on Wednesday was one reversing the order of the lower court in the case of the commonwealth against Dr. B. M. Dickinson.

This is the famous case in which Dr. Dickinson was charged with killing a male deer, the horns of which were alleged not to have been visible above the hair. This deer was killed in Clearfield county, the doctor a resident of Pittsburg, hunting with a party of friends from Clearfield.

Dr. Dickinson was arrested and Judge Searle, of Wayne county, hearing the case. The judge quashed the indictment and the commonwealth carried the case to the state supreme court. The latter directs that the order of Judge Searle be reversed and the indictment reinstated. This means that this famous case will again be heard in the Clearfield county court.

WHY?

Why not give somebody else a chance to speak of your good points?

Good evening! Fine evening to think of doing something to make Clearfield bigger and better.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.

Clearfield will issue bonds in the amount of thirty-eight thousand dollars, the funds derived from the sale to be used in making improvements in the borough. These improvements are absolutely necessary, comprising for the most part sewerage and paving. Clearfield is behind a number of the smaller towns in this section of the state, and it is not creditable to the town that it has not made greater progress in the matter of paving and sewerage.

The bids for the improvement bonds will be opened about the sixteenth of August. These bonds bear four per cent. interest, one per cent. higher than is paid by the banks for money deposited with them. Of the safety of an investment in these bonds nothing more need be said than that bonds issued by the borough of Clearfield are as good as those issued by any other municipality in the state. They are based on an actual assessed valuation of over three million dollars and are as safe as government bonds.

There is a large amount of money on deposit in the banks of Clearfield. The citizens to whom this money belongs could use some of it in the purchase of bonds of the borough. The banks, which have in the past taken great interest in the development of Clearfield, might take over a large number of these bonds as an investment and as proof that the banks have faith in the future progress of the borough. It is much to be preferred, however, that these bonds be purchased by individual citizens, since the citizens themselves will be benefited by the improvements which will be made by council.

With plenty of money in the community there should be a demand for bonds which are a perfectly safe investment. Curwensville and Philipsburg have recently sold four per cent. bonds readily. Clearfield is a more prosperous town than either of these boroughs, and it would be a reflection on the civic loyalty and pride of the citizens if the small amount of bonds offered should not be taken up by the individual citizens. When the citizens understand how safe these bonds are and that the improvements it is intended to make with the money derived from their sale will be beneficial not only to the borough, but to each individual citizen, it is expected that bids for the bonds will be received by the finance committee of councils far in excess of the amount of issue.

Consul Ben Chase's numerous friends in Clearfield county rejoice that he has again received recognition from the powers that be at Washington. Ben is going up higher in the consular line because he has proven that he is capable of doing things in the right way.

POWER OF JUDGES

They Alone Can Decide Who Shall Have Liquor Licenses.

The right of every judge of quarter sessions to refuse every liquor license application within the jurisdiction of his court, on the ground of "no necessity," was affirmed yesterday by the state superior court, sitting in Philadelphia.

This decision was made in refusing the appeal of liquor interests from the action of Judge George S. Criswell, who made Venango county dry last April by his sweeping refusal, under the Brooks law, to renew a single one of the twenty-three liquor licenses theretofore held in Venango county.

The opinion, written by President Judge Charles E. Rice holds that the Brooks law does not make it imperative that some licenses shall be granted in every county of the state, just as it cannot be construed to mean that some licenses shall be granted in every municipal subdivision of the county.

That, inasmuch as the statute provides that the license court, on due consideration of a certain application can conclude that that license is not necessary, the fact that the same conclusion is reached in some other or all the other applications cannot be regarded by the appellate court as sufficient reason for impeaching the decision of the lower court.

That the demand for liquor by consumers is not the sole and conclusive test to be applied in determining whether a license is necessary.

ELKS ELECT OFFICERS

Raymond Benjamin Chosen Grand Exalted Ruler at Denver Meet.
Denver, Col., July 16—Raymond Benjamin, of Napa, Cal., was elected grand exalted ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Tuesday by acclamation.

Other officers elected are: Grand loyal knight, E. M. Dickerman, Tucson; Grand lecturing knight, W. F. Schad, Milwaukee; grand secretary, Frederick C. Robinson, Dubuque, Ia.; grand treasurer, Charles A. White, Chicago; grand inner guard, Thomas C. Donohue, New London, Conn.; grand trustee, Calvin Kingsley, Waterloo, Ia.; grand esteemed leading knight, L. R. Maxwell, Marshalltown, Ia.; grand tiler, B. F. Koperlik, Pueblo.

Pittsburgh and Pottsville Elks joined hands in the fight against Atlanta for the 1916 convention. The Elks from the Smoky City voted to a man for Los Angeles as the 1915 meeting place. It was declared that this was a shrewd political play to induce the western delegates to favor Pittsburgh for the next year.

Atlanta delegates are fighting furiously. The Southern delegates as a rule are lining up for the Dixie city.

IN THE MOVIES

"The Conspiracy," world's special film in four parts, is a forceful melodrama. The daughter of a rich banker intent on marrying a "title" concocts a diabolical plan to rid herself of her rival. The depth to which the conspirators descend to accomplish their fiendish purpose is graphically told. During the action of the play the spectator is carried through a succession of surprising episodes, culminating in a gigantic fire scene in which the arch villainess is consumed in the flames. The way of the transgressor is hard, but love and virtue triumph in the end. The play is intensely interesting from beginning to end and is only one of the many good things that the manager of the opera house has in store for Clearfield people this summer.

"Universal Ike and the Vampire" is a comedy that will be shown at the opera house this evening. Universal Ike and his many adventures with the world are amusing and popular. This is, if anything, the best of the series that have been shown. "Laugh and the world laughs with you," is true of Universal Ike at least, for when he laughs the audience laughs with him, and when he doesn't laugh they naturally laugh at him.

"Snow Drift" is a two reel North-western drama, with O. A. C. Lund and Barbara Tennant playing the leading parts. The story carries the action from the woods of Canada into a Fifth Avenue society club and the denouement is entirely unexpected. Several of the scenes were taken during a blinding snowstorm at Lake Placid, N. Y., and at Cobalt, Canada, and a wonderfully realistic effect is obtained. Mr. Lund had his right hand severely frozen during the making of the exterior scenes and the pain expressed on his face during the action of the story is not simulated. These pictures will be shown at the opera house this evening.

A new series of split-reel comedies from the famous "Buster Brown" cartoons will be launched by the Edison company. Norris Millington, who has played in juvenile roles with Viola Allen and Robert Bennett, the Mary Jane in the original production will appear in that role throughout the series. Charles France will be the director.

The twelfth series of "Lucile Love" was shown at the opera house last evening and was heartily welcomed by the audience. In spite of stiff opposition and hot weather this series never fails to attract a crowd, the story is so intensely interesting and so well acted that the audience applauded again and again as some exciting scene was shown.

Scheming and intrigue combatted by love and virtue.

Eggshell Football.

Make the football by making a tiny hole in each end of the shell and blowing out the contents, and then mark boundaries on the table field with tape or chalk, having two ends of the table for goals. Each side elects a captain, and then the fun begins. At a given signal both sides or teams begin to blow upon the eggshell, that has been placed in the center of the field. Each side tries, of course, to blow the egg toward his goal. No player must leave his place, and it is a most rigid rule never to move the ball by any other way than blowing. For so doing a player is sent from the field, as in the actual game. Regular football rules are used, and the score is kept as in the real game. Each of the two teams should have a name, either ridiculous or after some of the colleges or schools. This always adds interest to the contest. Old and young equally enjoy the game, especially if they understand football tactics and rules.

Apples of Olden Times.

Long, long ago Greece was famous for its fine apples, and in the apple season people ate them at every meal. They had one kind so choice that each person was allowed to eat only one a day, and he was punished if he disobeyed this law.

The early Romans, too, were very fond of this fruit and had many fine apple trees near Rome. They were always trying new kinds of grafting and named the results after their favorite generals. They are said to have had twenty-two varieties.

The druids cherished this tree not only for its fine fruit, but also for the mistletoe which grew on it.

In Wales the poets were rewarded for their beautiful songs by a wreath of apple sprays.

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

"The king dead, Hare dead, and his daughter on the throne! How did she get here? And what the devil is a chap to do?" Bruce stooped and recovered his pipe and swore softly. "All, if this is true, then it's some devil work; and I'll wager my shooting eye that that sleek scoundrel Umballa, as they call him, is at the bottom of it. A white woman, good old Hare's daughter. I'll look into this."

The native who had spread this astounding news in Bruce's camp was already hastening back to the city, some 14 miles away. He had been a bhisti (water carrier) to the house of Ramabal up to the young banker's incarceration. To him, then, he carried the white hunter was coming hot-foot to the city. He turned and ran. Running was his business; he was as tireless as a camel and could run 20 and 30 miles at a stretch. The soles of his feet were as tough as elephant's hide. Thus he reached the city an hour before Bruce and Ramabal.

When Bruce and the native banker arrived at the gate coolies stood about with torches. Suddenly beyond the gate half a regiment drew up. The officer in charge raised his hand warningly.

"The white hunter is Bruce Sahib?" "Yes," Bruce spoke the dialects with passable fluency.

"Good. The sahib will be pleased to him."

"I am on my way to the palace." "That is impossible, sahib." At a sign from the officer the troops extended their guns at half aim. It was a necessary precaution. These white sahibs were generally a mad people and were quick to shoot. "Please dismount, sahib. It is the orders."

Two troopers stepped forward and took possession of the rifles which were slung on each side of the howdah. Bruce accepted the situation philosophically; argument or protest was futile. Next they took away his cartridge belt. He trembled for a moment with apprehension, but the troopers did not search him further; and he thanked God for the wisdom which had made him strap his revolvers under his armpits.

"What now?" he demanded.

"The sahib will be given his guns and ammunition the hour he starts back to camp."

"And in the meantime?"

"The sahib is free to come and go about the city so long as he does not approach the palace. If he is found in the vicinity of the zenana he will be arrested and imprisoned."

"This is all very high handed."

"Sahib, there is no British raj here. The orders of the regent and the Council are final. Submit."

"Very well."

"Ramabal!"

Ramabal stepped forward. By a kind of clairvoyance he saw what was coming.

"Ramabal, the orders are that you shall retire to your house and remain there till further orders."

"I am the queen's bodyguard."

"Al! Well said! But I do not take my orders from the queen—yet. Obey. The sahib may accompany you if he wishes, there are no orders against that."

"We have been betrayed," said Ramabal. "I know not how."

"You were followed. A moment," said Bruce, turning to the officer. "I have a servant by the name of Rao. I believe he acted as bearer to the young lady at the palace. What has become of him?"

The officer smiled and shook his head.

"Rao is a prisoner, then," thought the young man. "That black scoundrel Umballa is at least thorough." Aloud he said: "We shall go at once to your house, Ramabal."

And all through the night they planned and planned, but not knowing where the first ordeal was to take place, nor the hour, they found themselves going round in a circle, getting nowhere. To a man of action like Bruce it was maddening.

He slept a little before dawn, and was aroused by voices below. He listened.

"I am Jawahir Lal, the water carrier. Each day at dawn I water the garden of Ramabal to pay a debt."

Bruce looked toward Ramabal, who slept the sleep of the profoundly wearied. A bhisti; perhaps a messenger.

"Go around to the rear gate, which can be opened," said the trooper.

Bruce went to the window overlooking the garden. He saw the water carrier enter through the bamboo gate, heard the water slosh about jerkily as the bhisti emptied his goatskin. He watched the man curiously; saw him drop the skin and tiptoe toward the house, glance right and left alertly. Then he disappeared. Presently at the head of the stairs Bruce heard a whisper—"Ramabal!"

"Who is it?" Bruce whispered in the dialect.

"Ahmed."

Ahmed. Who was Ahmed? Bruce shook Ramabal. "Ahmed is here. Who is he?" he asked softly.

"Ahmed?" drowsily. Then, wide awake enough. "Ahmed? He was Hare Sahib's head animal man. Where is he?"

"Hush! Not so loud. Come up, Ahmed, I am Bruce. Let us speak in English."

"Good!" Ahmed came into the chamber. "To see Bruce Sahib is good. Tomorrow my master's daughter is to be carried into the jungle. The memsahib is to be tied inside a tiger trap, bait for the cat. That is the first ordeal."

"Shaitan!" murmured Ramabal.

"Go on, Ahmed."

"The cage will be set near the old peepul tree, not far from the south gate. Now, you sahib, and you, Ramabal, must hide somewhere near. It is the law that if she escapes the ordeal from unexpected sources she is free, at least till the second ordeal. I know not what that is at present or when it is to take place. The troops will be there, and the populace, the Council, the priests, and Umballa. I shall have two swift camels near the clump of bamboo. I may not be there, but some one will. She must be hurried off before the confusion dies away. Must, sahib. There must be no second ordeal."

"But how am I to get out of here?" asked Ramabal. "Guards all about, and doubtless hidden to shoot if I stir!"

"Tch! Tch!" clicked Ahmed. He unwound his dirty turban and slipped out of the ragged shirtlike frock.

"These and the water skin below. A bhisti entered, a bhisti goes out. What is simpler than that? It is not light enough for the soldiers to notice."

"Ahmed," said Bruce, holding out his hand, "you're a man."

"Thanks, sahib," drily. "But hasten! At dawn tomorrow, or late tonight, Ramabal returns with a full water skin. The memsahib must at least stand the ordeal of terror, for she is guarded too well. Yet, if they were not going to bind her, I should not worry. She has animal magic in her eye, in her voice. I have seen wild beasts grow still when she spoke. Who knows? Now, I sleep."

Bruce and Ramabal had no difficulty in passing the guards. They wisely made a wide detour to the peepul tree, which they climbed, disturbing the apes and the parakeets.

Somewhere near 3 o'clock they heard the creaking of wheels and a murmur of voices. Shortly into the range of vision drew a pair of bullocks, pulling a tiger trap toward the clearing.

When Bruce saw this damnable thing he understood, and he shook with horror and voiceless rage. He caught Ramabal by the arm so savagely that a low cry came from the brown man's lips.

"Patience, sahib!" he warned. "Without you what will the memsahib do? They will tie her in that and liberate a tiger. The rest lies with you, sahib."

"Ramabal, as God hears me, some one shall pay for this!"

"Hush!" again warned Ramabal, hugging his perch.

Later by half an hour Bruce witnessed a spectacle such as few white men, happily for their reason, are permitted to see. Kathlyn, in her royal robes (for ordeals of this character were ceremonial), a necklace of wonderful emeralds about her throat, stepped from her palanquin and stood waiting. From other vehicles and conveyances stepped Umballa, the Council, and the yellow-robed priests.

He saw the bejeweled turban of Umballa bend toward the girl, and it was hard to resist taking a pot at the men. Kathlyn shook her head. Thereupon she was led to the trap, her hands bound, and the rope round her waist attached securely to the ring.

Ah, they talked about it that night in the surging bazaars. In the palace, wherever two persons came together, how the white hunter had appeared from nowhere, rushed toward the trap as the tiger approached, entered and dropped the door, blazed away at the beast, who turned flat and limped off into the jungle. Al! It was a sight for eyes. They could laugh behind Umballa's back, the gutter born, the iron-heeled upstart, they could riddle (confidentially) the Council with rude jests. The law was the law, and none, not even the priests in their shaven polls and yellow robes, might slip beyond the law as it read. The first ordeal was over. Nor, as the law read, could they lay hands upon this brave young man. Al! It was good. Umballa must look elsewhere for his chief wife.

the memsahib would not adorn his zenana.

"Thank you," Kathlyn had said. "Somehow I knew you would come." And what she had seen in his eyes had made her tremble visibly for the first time that day.

She was conducted back to the palace. The populace howled and cheered about her palanquin to the very gates. Not in many a big rain had they had such excitement.

The fury in Umballa's heart might have disquieted Bruce had he known of its existence.

Kathlyn, arriving in her chamber, flung herself down upon her cushions and lay there like one dead, nor would she be comforted by the worshipping Pundita. Bruce had saved her this time, but it was not possible that he could repeat the feat.

Having convinced Umballa and the council that she would not marry her persecutor, the council announced to the populace that on the next fete day the queen would confront the lions in the elephant arena. What could one man do against such odds? Lions brought from the far Nubian deserts, fierce, untamable.

That night there was a conference between Bruce, Ahmed and Ramabal. "They have taken my guns away, and God knows I can't do the impossible. Where the devil were your camels, Ahmed?"

"Umballa has his spies, Ramabal," said Ahmed, smiling, as he got into his bhisti rags, which Ramabal had surrendered willingly enough. "Ramabal, thou conspirator, what about the powder mines you and your friends hid when the late King signified that he was inclined toward British protection? Eh? What about the republic thou hadst dreams of? Poor fool! It is in our blood to be ruled by kings, oppressed; we should not know what to do with absolute freedom. There! Fear not. Why should I betray thee? The mines. The arena is of wood."

"But there will be many of my friends there," said the bewildered Ramabal. Who was this strange man who seemed to know everything?

"Put the mines in the center of the arena. What we want is merely terror and confusion. Pour! Bang! There's your miracle. And a little one under the royal pavilion. And Umballa and the council sleep in Shaitan's arms. Welcome, my lambs!" And Ahmed laughed noiselessly.

"By the Lord!" gasped Bruce. "But the fuses? No, no, Ahmed, it cannot be done."

"In the house of my friend Lal Singh there is a cellar full of strange magic—magic with copper wires that spit blue fires. Eh, sahib? You and I know, we have traveled."

"Batteries, here, in this wilderness?"

"Even so. To you, Ramabal, the powder to me, the spitting wires, to you, Bruce Sahib, patience. Umballa shall yet wear raw the soles of his feet in the treadmill."

On the night before the ordeal men moved cautiously about the elephant arena. It was only after much persuasion and argument could Bruce hold the men. At the testing of Lal Singh's wires and batteries they had started to fly. This was devil's fire.

At the end of the arena, in a box which Bruce was to occupy, by order of the Council (where they proposed to keep an eye upon him and Umballa to wring his heart), the key to the wires was laid. This box was directly over a wooden canopy where the mahouts loafed between fights. Back of this canopy was a door which led outside. Through this Bruce proposed to lead Kathlyn during the confusion created by the explosion.

On the day of the ordeal only the bedridden remained at home.

When Kathlyn arrived she was placed under the canopy; another bit of kindly attention on the part of Umballa to twist the white man's heart. But nothing could have happened more to the satisfaction of Bruce.

"Kathlyn Hare," he called out softly in Spanish, "do you hear and understand me?"

"Yes," she replied in the same tongue. "Do nothing desperate. Don't throw away your life. I have a sister in America. Will you tell her?"

"Listen. Under no circumstances leave the canopy. The lions come only to go to rescue but save you. Attend me carefully. Behind you is a door. There will be an explosion in the center of the arena. There was to be another under our friend Umballa, but the battery was old. Press toward that door. I have the key."

"Ah, Mr. Bruce!"

"Kathlyn, my name is John."

"The lions, the lions!" howled the populace.

The great, jawny African brutes blinked and turned their shaggy heads this way and that, uneasily. Kathlyn stood very still. How, how could they save her? At length the lions espied her, attracted by the white of her robe. One bounded forward, growling. The others immediately started in pursuit.

Suddenly the center of the arena opened and a tremendous roar followed. A low wall of terror ran round the arena. Surely this memsahib had all the gods with her. A great service had opened up between Kathlyn and the lions, one of which lay dead. There came the rush toward the exits, a mad, frantic rush. Not even Umballa, who knew that not the gods but man had contrived this havoc, not even Umballa waited, but fled, beating down all those who blocked his path.

Bruce and Ramabal dropped over the railing to Kathlyn's side. But the key upon which their escape depended would not unlock the door.

CHAPTER V.

The Flight From the Arena.

When Bruce dropped down into the arena to Kathlyn's side he had never given a thought to the possibility of the key not being the right one. Trapped—and with Ahmed but a few yards away with a senana gharri ready to convey them to the camp freedom! It took the heart out of him for a moment. The confusion all about, the pall of dust, the roaring of the frightened lions which had escaped destruction, the shrill cries of the panic-stricken populace, who now looked upon the white memsahib as the daughter of Shaitan, these dulled his inventive faculties for the nonce. Here was the confusion, properly planned, and he could not make use of it. Possibly when no further explosion shook the air, the mob and the soldiers would return out of curiosity. And then, good-by!

But the sight of a lion emerging from the murky wrong side of the crevasse roused him thoroughly.

"Save yourself!" cried Kathlyn in despair; "there is no possible way of saving me. I have never in all my life injured any one, and yet God makes me go through all this."

"Run!"

Bruce laughed; it was that kind of laughter with which men enter battle. He drew Lal Singh's revolver and thrust one into her hand.

"Shoot at the keyhole. Leave the lion to me. With the pandemonium no one will note the shots, or if they do, will think that more explosions are on the way. I'll get you out of this nightmare; that's what I was born for."

"Nightmare!"

"There, now!"—as Kathlyn leaned dizzily against one of the supports.

"I've gone through a good deal," she said without more ado she pressed the muzzle of the revolver into the keyhole and fired. She heard a shot behind her, another and another, but she kept on firing into and about the keyhole till the revolver was empty.

A firm hand drew her aside.

"The lion?"

"Gone to sleep. Let me have a whack at that door."

"Where's Ramabal?"

"Went back over the wall. Probably to warn Ahmed; maybe gone directly off toward camp. Anyhow, he has faith in me."

"And, O! so have I, so have I!"

Bruce bore his weight savagely against the door—once, twice, thrice; and pitched forward on his knees, outside. He was up instantly. He caught Kathlyn by the hand and hurried her along; and all she could think of was Winnie romping toward the canopied veranda, and the leopard cat sprawled on the ditan.

"Sahib! Huzoor!" a voice called. "This way!"

Stuck.

Little Harold was sent to a neighbor's house on an errand. In due time he came back and was questioned by his mother what Mrs. Glichris folks were doing. "They had company, and they were all talking in German," answered the lad, "but I couldn't tell what language they were laughing in."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening hair, streaked and faded hair in grandmother's treatment, and tells are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite as valuable, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musky mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy."

For about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb of a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides, beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

HAD NO SENSE OF HUMOR.

He Couldn't Clearly See the Joke the Boys Had on Him.

Some people have absolutely no sense of humor. A little London urchin ran into a baker's shop and, placing a half-penny on the counter, asked nervously and timidly, "Mister, have you a 'alfpenny buster (bun)?"

"Yes, my little man. Here is one quite hot."

"Thanks, mister. Would you mind a-shovin' it down my back?"

"Down your back, my little man! Why down your back?"

"Cos, sir, I'm only a little un, and if those chaps outside know I've a buster they'll take it, and I am so 'ungry, I am."

"Dear me, how wrong of them! Come round here, my little chap. There—there, it is down your back."

The boy ran off. In an instant another entered—a bigger boy.

"I say, mister, 'as a little boy just been in 'ere?"

"Yes."

"And did 'e buy a 'alfpenny buster?"

"Yes."

"And did 'e arse you to shove it down 'is back, 'as us big fellows would take it?"

"Yes."

"Yah! Where's your watch and chain? 'E's got 'em. 'E's just round the corner."

Out rushed the baker. In a trice the big boy collared the till and bolted.

The shopman never saw the comic side of the transaction at all.—London Strand Magazine.

NATIONAL SANDWICHES.

Russian.—Slice some cold roast venison and spread over it a paste made of hard boiled egg yolks, rubbed with butter; season with pepper, salt and minced celery and serve on round pieces of bread.

German.—Steam veinerwursts about ten minutes, skin and turn into a meat dish; mix with finely chopped onion and enough tomato catsup to moisten; lay thickly between buttered slices of brown bread.

Irish.—Cream half a cup of butter and put a teaspoonful of ground mustard seed, a shake of pepper and a little chopped parsley in it. Chop together hard cooked eggs and roast pork or boiled ham, mix with the butter dressing and spread on thin slices of bread.

Yankee.—Mince sturgeon, hard cooked eggs, water cress, parsley or lettuce with French mustard; spread this on nutmeg dusted, buttered slices of bread.

Scotch.—Blend three tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of prepared mustard, salt, pepper and yolk of egg; stir into this minced lamb, lay on rye bread cut thin and buttered.

Parisian.—Mince turtle meat, terrapin or frogs' legs which have been cooked, mix with mayonnaise dressing and spread on lettuce leaves, put between slices of French bread, cut thin and well buttered.

Bohemian.—Chop up very fine any kind of wild fowl, bird or game meat that has been boiled or roasted. Put it in a saucepan with sufficient gravy to soften it; add a piece of butter, pepper, celery and mild spices; while heating, mix these ingredients to a smooth paste; when cold spread on slices of stale bread. A few drops of lemon juice squeezed over the sandwich before putting the slices together improves the sandwich.

Scandinavian.—Fresh herring, cooked or smoked may be used, pounded with hard cooked egg yolks in a mortar, season with salt, pepper and cream; spread on buttered biscuits.

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Lemon Juice.

Lemon juice will:

Prevent diphtheria.

Cure a sore throat or cough.

Cure a fever.

Drive away a sick headache.

Cure malaria.

Beautify the complexion.

Make the hair fluffy.

For a sore throat, gargle with pure, undiluted, unsweetened lemon juice.

For a cough or cold mix equal parts of lemon juice and strained honey, and take a tablespoonful every hour.

For a sick headache mix one part lemon juice and two parts boiling water and sip a teaspoonful as hot as possible every two hours.

For malaria mix the juice of half a lemon with two tablespoonfuls of water and a little sugar and drink three times a day.

For a felon cut off the end of a lemon, stick the finger into the hole and bind it on. Let it stay for a day or two, when it will be ready to lance.

For the complexion mix equal parts of rose water and glycerin and dip a cut lemon into this and rub the face with it. After it dries rub with cold cream.

For the hair add the juice of a lemon to the last rinsing water of a shampoo.

CHEERFUL PATIENCE.

Patience and cheerfulness work wonders. One of the hardest and yet one of the most useful lessons we can ever learn is to smile and wait after we have done our best. He is not a philosopher who has not learned the secret of smiling and waiting. A great many people can smile at difficulties who cannot wait, who lack patience, but the man who can both smile and wait, if he has the tenacity of purpose which never turns back, will surely win.

One on Father.

A young minister preached one Sunday to a rural congregation and spent the next day visiting the people. At one house the man of the house was expressing his appreciation of the sermon in very complimentary terms while assisting the minister to put up his team. His little son had followed him and after eyeing the minister a minute or two exclaimed: "Why, papa, you said he was a one hoss preacher, but he's got two hosses!"—National Monthly.

RAILROAD NEWS

Items of Interest, Gathered Here and There, For The Boys Who Man The Trains

The Railroad Clerk.

I want to be a railroad clerk

And draw his princely pay,

Where all I'll have to do is work

Some eighteen hours a day.

I'd like to join those happy guys

With hearts so full of cheer,

Who overstrain their weary eyes

Six hundred days a year.

I want to be a railroad clerk.

I'm very fond of toll;

In fact I fairly love to work

While burning midnight oil.

Such things as sleep I truly hate,

I much prefer to pore

O'er way-bills in triplicate

And heaped up by the score.

I want to be a railroad clerk

And work from dawn to dark;

I really do not care to lurk

Of evening's in the park.

I'd rather sit upon a stool

And scratch with busy pen,

For that's the way—so says the rule

With all successful men.

I want to be a railroad clerk,

For that's the way to climb;

I will not lag, I will not shirk,

But labor all the time.

I will not mind the strain and stress,

So, if you'll take me on,

—By S. P. G. 'n' 'le—in Exchange.

If the railroads of the United States had paid $10,000 the maximum amount fixed by law as damages for death, for every life they took during the year which ended June 30, they would have paid $101,500,000.

The records of the interstate commerce commission show that for the year just ended there were 10,150 killed. More than 190,000 were injured during the same period.

The figures as to the number killed and injured indicate the railroads are more deadly than war, pestilence and famine combined.

More than 210,000 persons have been killed on American railroads during the last twenty-five years and more than 2,000,000 injured. Figure that out and see what it means to families left dependent, bereaved and their futures changed, to insurance companies and to the railroads themselves, and you will not wonder that the interstate commerce commission is taking the matter seriously.

Shriner's Social Train.

Local Pennsylvania railroad officials Sunday made arrangements for the movement from here of a special train, next Thursday, to carry the Shriner's of Jaffa temple to the big ceremonial session to be held at Coudersport. The special will leave here at 1 10 P. M., Thursday, pick-up Shriners at all stopping points, Tyrone, Lock Haven, Emporium Junction and Port Allegheny, arriving at Coudersport at 7 that evening. Returning, the special will leave Coudersport for Altoona at 1 o'clock Saturday morning and arrive here at 7:30 the same morning.—Altoona Tribune.

Efficiency Tests.

Efficiency tests for June on the Middle division of the Pennsylvania numbered 28,493. Only four trainmen were found deficient, giving the division percentage of 99.9. There were 171 surprise tests made. Two engineers failed to hear torpedoes and one engine man ran past a block signal. He was suspended for two weeks. Inspectors also made 28,332 observations and only one employee was found deficient. A brakeman had failed to protect the rear of his train and was reprimanded.

Hauling Heavy Trains.

The B. & P. management are making some extensive experiments on Clarion hill along the line of power and tonnage. They have been able during the past week to increase the number of tons to each train largely. One of their Mikado engines with a pusher handled easily 2200 tons from Clarion Junction to Freeman. For the first trial the same power was given 2400 tons which it handled with apparent ease. However when the loading was increased to 2600 tons it stalled at Ketur, which is about six miles north of Clarion Junction. The B. & P. are expecting to receive this week the first of an order of several Mallet articulated compound locomotives for trial on the mountain.

To Accommodate Public.

Acting on requests received from a number of business men of Punxsutawney, the P. R. R. has made arrangements to have its early East-bound train on the Low Grade wait at Falls Creek for the early B. & P. train leaving Punxsutawney.

Heretofore the Pennsy train left Falls Creek at about the same time that the northbound train came in from Punxsutawney. As a result of the exceedingly close connection, parties of eastbound travelers often were unable to make the transfer.

Sees Prosperity Ahead.

W. T. Noonan, president of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, in an interview asserts that the country not only is on the verge of great activity, but that it is going to experience the longest period of prosperity it ever enjoyed. He believes recent conditions, especially as applying to railroads, have been caused by "uncertainty" relative to state and national legislation. He thinks, however, that the bugaboo of the legislative bodies has been exaggerated.

Still at Work on Grades.

A corps of civil engineers employed by the New York Central Railroad company, who have been employed near Renovo for some time, are now at work in this section. They have headquarters at the Hotel Russell and are now working eastward toward Youngdale. The presumption is that they are still at work on grades for the new river branch from Keating to

Avia, but are reticent regarding any such—Lock Haven Express

Pennsy Officials Clear.

President Samuel Rea, of the Pennsylvania railroad, and T. DeWitt Cuyler, a director in that company, are both directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, in which the Pennsylvania railroad now has a large interest. Neither was a director of the New Haven, however, at the time when the transactions criticized by the interstate commerce commission in its report to congress were consummated. Mr. Rea and Mr. Cuyler were not elected to the New Haven board until the later part of 1910

Getting Ready for Camp.

Notice to Advertisers!

A new rate for advertising will be in effect on Saturday, August 1st, 1914, and copies of this rate in pamphlet form will be ready for distribution August 20, 1914. ¶ This new rate is made necessary by the greatly increased circulation, and cost of publication of the Progress. The present circulation is about five times larger than a year ago. ¶ Many new features have been, and will be added, such as "Bud" Fisher's "Mutt and Jeff," a daily news illustration service, a free cut, or illustration service for advertisers, (proofs of which may be obtained at this office), and last but not least, our daily news service; all of which will make the Daily Progress a real up to the minute daily. ¶ The Progress goes into nearly every home in Clearfield and has an excellent circulation in most of the homes throughout the surrounding country, so that the new rate will not meet with much, if any disapproval.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 "rat" of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

James Staver entertained several of his little friends yesterday afternoon in honor of his third birthday, at his home on Walnut street, from 4 until 5 o'clock. The children played games until they were ushered into the dining room, which, as one of the little tots so aptly put it, "looked just as though a fairy had come while you were sleeping and fixed it."

The table was decorated with a cake in the middle with three pink candles; other candles with pink shades were placed at each end of it, a brown eyed susan lay at each child's place with a pin to fasten it on with a bouquet of beautiful flowers stood on the side table and green vines were woven through the back of each chair. Delicious refreshments were served. He was the recipient of several very pretty presents. The guests were Misses Doris Paterson, Leah and Jean Taylor, Eleanor Stauffer, Louise Mitchell, Gertrude Leap, Pauline Fleck, Dorothy Logan and Albert Adams.

Miss Alice Dill has issued invitations for a progressive euchre party to begive Friday, July 17, in honor of the Patton house party.

TWENTY-ROUND FIGHT IN LONDON TONIGHT

George Carpentier and Gunboat
Smith to Try Conclusions

(By International News Service)
London, July 16—George Carpentier, heavyweight champion of Europe and Gunboat Smith, America's white aspirant for the heavyweight championship of the world, meet tonight at Olympia in a twenty-round battle which is bound to make ring history. They fight for a purse of $45,000 and what is more important—the right to meet Jack Johnson.

Sporting men from the United States and France are here in large numbers and as much interest is being taken as was shown at Paris on the occasion of the recent Johnson-Moran meeting. It is the first time that the champions of France and America in the heavyweight division (barring negroes) have ever met. Opinion is greatly mixed. The dandy Carpentier is so idolized by French that it is impossible to get fair judgment of him from Parisians. Few are trying to name the winner.

Sentiment among the Americans, strange as it may seem, favors the Frenchman. This is hard to account for. But there are certain men going about saying that the Gunner is not game—just on what they base this insult is hard to determine.

Carpentier was born at Lena, France, on Jan. 12, 1894. Less than four years ago he was boxing in the 115-pound class. Today he stands six feet one inch and weighs 180 pounds. He is a fast fighter and clever boxer. He is equally good at longer range and in-fighting. He can take punishment and in many respects is more like an American than any other man in Europe.

Carpentier has been boxing seven years, although he is not yet 21 years of age. This means that he began to take part in battles in the ring when he was thirteen. Smith began to fight as a professional in 1908. He began his experience in the ring when 20 years old. He is now twenty-six. Both men are in the full glow of early manhood. They possess also the four essentials of successful pugilists—youth, strength, virility and the "wallop."

No man has created a greater sensation in France during the last 20 years than Carpentier. He is a public idol. Wherever he goes he is surrounded by a big crowd. Men and women jostle each other to obtain a glimpse of him. Bronze statues of him in boxing pose can be found in every city and hamlet of France. His pictures hold prominent places in cafes and shop windows. He dresses in the latest fashion and is such a dandy that many things are called after him. And all because in less than two years he placed France on the map in a position which she had never held before—that of being the birthplace and home of the best prize fighter in Europe.

But Carpentier did not earn his honors without defeat. Like Napoleon he has his Waterloo, but, unlike that great fighter, he was not eclipsed when he met with a crushing defeat. He lost several battles early in his career. When in the bantamweight division he was knocked out by Gloria in six rounds—the first and only time when he was unable to respond when the referee counted ten over him. He lost to Buck Shine and Young Snowball in the featherweight division. Dixie Kid, an American negro, defeated him in five rounds in 1911 when he was a welterweight. After winning the middleweight titles of France and England, Frank Klaus, of Pittsburg, thrashed him so soundly in a bout at Dieppe, France, that Carpentier in the nineteenth round committed a foul for which he was disqualified. Klaus won the middleweight championship of the world with this decision. This was in June, 1912. In October of that year, Billy Papke, the Illinois Thunderbolt, who was then in Paris, forced Carpentier to "quit" after pounding him till his face was a mass of cuts and bruises.

Since his battle with Papke, Carpentier has had an uninterrupted string of victories. With increasing avardupois came greater strength and skill and he won every battle that he fought in 1913 and 1914. It was his two knockout victories over Bombardier Wells, the first at Ghent, Belgium, in four rounds, and the second at the National Sporting club of London in less than one round, that gave him his great prestige.

Gunboat Smith's real name is Edward Eckhard. He was born May 8, 1888, in Philadelphia. He is a six footer and weighs 189 pounds in fighting trim. He earned his nom-de-11ng because he was a gunner in the American navy. While a sailor he learned to box. He is the knockout artist "par excellence" among the "white hopes" of America. He has earned more victories with one punch than any other man since the days of John L. Sullivan.

SPORTING NOTES

Sporting Notes.

Ty Cobb's absence from the game is injuring the Detroit Tigers a whole lot. Cobb is recognized as the greatest player in the game today and his return to the old ball game means much to Hughie Jennings' pennant chances.

Pattering after his famous brother, the national open golf champion, Raymond Quimet has started to collect golf titles. He is showing the kind of game that brought honors to Francis Ouimet.

Tommy Leach, the diminutive Cub outfielder, seems to have been overlooked by those who are singing the praises of players who have lived long in major league circles. The achievements of Wagner, in his eighteenth term, Lajoie in his nineteenth, are heralded, but Tommy in his sixteenth year is passed by.

J. Franklin Baker, the home-run artist of the Athletics, has knocked out more safeties this season than any player in the league. J. Franklin has 94 safe clouts to his credit, among which are seven circuit clouts.

Vean Gregg, the star Nap southpaw, is the leading twirler of the American league at the present writing. Vean has registered seven victories and one defeat. Walter Johnson has won fourteen games and lost seven.

Bill Recap says that Jack Johnson is no longer invincible. He further asserts that Jess Willard, the husky young American, is the model heavyweight for the holder of the crown.

A serious question in the mind of Connie Mack at the present time is, "will John Coombs be able to 'come back'?" The return of this star twirler to the game means a whole lot to Connie's pennant chances.

Beating us at our game is well illustrated by the Chinese university baseball team. The Orientals have shown that their baseball coteri can blaze the trail for many major American universities, as well as some minor league teams.

Suspicious Character Arrested by Officer Jeffries in DuBois.

Yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock Chief of Police Jeffries placed under arrest a man who to say the least was acting in a very suspicious manner. The attention of the officer had been previously called to the fact that an old man had been visiting the different stores in town trying to sell postage stamps to the merchants, offering seventy-five cents worth of stamps for fifty cents. It was discovered that another man with stamps and Officer Jeffries located the man and took him into custody on suspicion pending an investigation. The old man was also held as a witness.

When first arrested he gave his name as John Harrison and his residence as Washington, D. C., later however he said his name was John W. Miller. The postage stamps were one, two, three and four cent denominations. A small number of stamps were found on his person—DuBois Courier.
